

PRINTERS' PROTEST GEAR APPROVAL BY COURT'S ORDER

Free Placing of Firms' Names on Envelopes Will Be Stopped.

The House Committee on Postoffice and Postroads has decided to include in the appropriation bill prohibiting the placing of a printer's name on the Postoffice Department from furnishing stamped envelopes containing the names and addresses of the business houses to which they are supplied.

For a slight additional cost, it has been possible for business firms to obtain stamped envelopes from the department which bore in the left-hand corner the printer's name, and the Postoffice Department from furnishing stamped envelopes containing the names and addresses of the business houses to which they are supplied.

The department has made little or no profit on the printing of envelopes. The practice employed mainly for the convenience of the larger houses who purchase envelopes in 1,000 lots.

STEEL MILLERS RETURN TO WORK

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Pa., Feb. 12.—The Bethlehem Steel Company has granted a number of asked-for concessions to its steel millers, and the 500 men in that department today went back to work, ending a strike which had remained out until the grievances of the other 2,000 men were settled. The strikers' hope for a speedy settlement, but this is unlikely if they persist in their declaration that the company must recognize the union.

It was officially stated by the company today that if the men will return to work the company will take up at once for settlement any questions in dispute. The company will not treat with the officials of the union.

It is likely the strike will not be settled today. The company claims it has deferred filling the places of the strikers because it prefers to continue its men in their positions. If they do not return to work by the middle of next week, say the officials, their places will be filled.

Representatives of the men stated today that the work of unloading the plant is proceeding rapidly, and that they will soon be in a position to tie the works up completely.

ANTI-TIPPING BILL MEETS OPPOSITION

Whatever criticism may befall the new Board of Commissioners, it can never be said that they are "tight wads."

In forwarding to Congress an adverse report on the anti-tipping bill introduced by Representative Murphy of Missouri, the committee is, it is said, governed by the fact that after careful study of the bill, they have concluded that it is not in the public interest to give the Corporation Counsel the right to dispose of or receive property, its constitutionality is doubtful.

The Commission sometimes dine at the hotels. They express the opinion, therefore, that if the bill should be enacted its provisions would be impracticable of enforcement.

It is taken as proof that they have had conclusive evidence of the value in return of service of a quarter or half dollar bestowed upon the waiter.

ARMY AND NAVY SERVICE ORDERS

Following the mandate of the Court of Appeals, Judge Mulwain in Police Court this morning quashed the information charging Carrie Nation with destroying personal property in the barroom at the Union Station.

Aside from the interest aroused in the case by the fact that Mrs. Nation was connected with it, the opinion of the Court of Appeals is important in that it directs that hereafter all prosecutions for the destruction of movable property shall be brought in the name of the United States and not in the name of the District of Columbia, as has been the practice, and that where the value of the property is above $5, the prosecution shall be by indictment of the grand jury.

Attorney Matthew O'Brien, who represented Mrs. Nation, claims that no further action can be taken against his client on account of the Union Station episode.

"She was found not guilty of disorderly conduct growing out of the same affair," he said, "and cannot be put in jeopardy for the same act twice. Mrs. Nation is now in South Carolina, and I will be in Washington again in April."

PRINCESS ZARA BY Ross Beckman

Synopsis of Chapters Already Published

Princess Zara de Echeveria, of St. Petersburg, visits America. She is met upon her arrival by Alexei Sabotev, who tells her that her connection with the nihilists is known. She makes reply, but fails to realize that her story is then taken up by Daniel Derwent, urged by Sabotev to join the nihilists and services to the czar, who makes him head of the "Princess of Silence" and this time dropping down beside her, and putting my arm around her. "No, Zara, not that. It is a matter of life and death. It is impossible. It is much more impossible now than it was before."

"Because I love you, dear," she said, smiling, "as if that were not a greater reason for your taking it, instead of denying it?"

"No, Zara," I said again. "I cannot take the oath of nihilism. I have already taken an oath which thoroughly obviates such a possibility."

"Another oath, Duvravnik?"

"To whom?"

"To the czar."

"I have forgotten that you were in the service of his majesty. I thought you had drawn away from me at that point. The motion was so slight as to be almost imperceptible. I had forgotten all that about you, Duvravnik. Again there were eyes upon me, more than before. 'You are under oath to the czar; to the man who, because he is so many wrongs to happen in the service of his majesty. I thought you had drawn away from me at that point.
